

Winter Georetreat: Crail, Fife 15-18 November 2018

Four days of geology, good food and sparkling company in a large, comfortable house in Fife. We'll have plenty of resources to browse, absorb and discuss: including books, maps and microscope slides. And whenever the weather suits, we'll get outside for short excursions to local sites of interest, including the fantastic geology of nearby locations such as St Monans, Crail harbour, Fife Ness, the fossil layers at Randerston, Kingsbarns and the Rock and Spindle volcanic vent near St Andrews. Depending on the weather, excursions might last for an hour or two or most of the day, then back to base for short talks, including an invited speaker or two, and plenty geological discussion at your level: this is a great informal opportunity for a general introduction to geology or to get into more detail of any subject that interests you.

This four-day Georetreat will be based at Caiplie House in Crail, a large Victorian House with plenty of space. Accommodation, food and geological instruction all included.
